

rGlohJahWwans Universalisability

Contributed by Dainis W. Michel
Friday, 12 October 2007
Last Updated Thursday, 22 May 2008

You can apply rGlohJahWwans Universalisability by going through each of the concepts rGlohJahWwans stands for and asking the kinds of questions outlined below.

You can get creative with this, so have fun.

Here are questions you can ask regarding the rGlohJahWwans concepts:

- Is it Robust?
- Is it Green? Is it environmentally sound?
- Does it support my ideal Lifestyle?
- Is it Harmonious? Does it create harmony?
- Is it Joyful? Does it spread joy?
- Is it Abundant and does doing/having/being/buying/etc. it create abundance?
- Is it Healthy?
- Does it create and magnify not only my Wealth, but the wealth of others?
- Is it wise? Does it facilitate Wisdom?
- Is it Nurturing? Does it create wonderful room for growth?
- Is it Sustainable? What would happen if everybody did it?

Sustainability is a new concept for some, and to check whether whatever you're thinking about pursuing is sustainable, just ask the Kantian question "what if everybody did it?" You can get creative and ask "What if everybody did it all the time?" "What if everybody did it as much as possible?" "What if no one did it?" etc.

As an example, let's apply rGlohJahWwans Universalisability to driving a gasoline-powered car.

- Is it robust? Sure, can be
- Is it green? No.

You can keep going, but once you get a "no," you can skip to the sustainability question: "What if everyone drove gasoline-powered cars?"

Well, we'd have:

- toxic emissions
- illness
- global warming
- poisoned atmosphere
- lots more bad stuff

What if everyone did it all the time?

- We'd have a global catastrophe!

OK, so driving a gasoline-powered car is not "rGlohJahWwan." But driving a super-cool, super-fast, solar-charged electric car is! So yay! Drive electric. Convert your car. It'll be fun! Wooohoooo!

See how it works? Just go through the rGlohJahWwans acronymn when making your purchase decisions. Also, remember that it's not a time to be perfect...but the time is ripe to start heading in the right direction...and you can do that by applying rGlohJahWwans Universalisability regularly!